CREDIT

Is an asset in life — establish yours by joining the Association.

Few business undertakings of any size or importance are carried through without the borrowing of money. Big business men are such, not because of the capital that they can command. It is their ability, integrity and record that makes people willing to lend them money.

If you have established habits of thrift and are known to be responsible and industrious you will find others ready to help you when you desire to undertake something worth while or when for any reason it is necessary for you to borrow money.

By joining this Association you come in contact with other earnest and industrious people whose acquaintance will be worth your while.

Our new series shares opened in July, but you can still join. There is nothing like the B. & L. for "owning and having." We invite you to begin saving through us. The plan is simple. Let us explain.

Must Report Diseases.

On August 4th D. B. Cameron was tried before Magistrate W. T. Mullis and convicted for violating the quarantine law by failing to notify the quarantine officer of a case of whooping cough in his home; was discharged on the payment of cost, as it was the first offense.

On August 5th W. G. Hudson was tried and convicted for the same offense; he was fined five dollars and costs.

Now is the time for each and every one to do their part in the prevention of further spread of whooping cough, and probably save the lives of many children who would otherwise develop the disease and likely die. The way to stop the spread is to report all suspected cases promptly to the quarantine officer.

When a case of any contagious disease is suspected in a home the law requires it to be reported within 24 hours after the symptoms are sufficient to lead us to suspect the disease. If a doctor is consulted in regard to a case, it is his duty to report; if no doctor is consulted it is the duty of the parent or householder to report it. If there is a case of any of the reportable diseases in the county that has not been reported, some one has violated the law.

The people of the county are entitled to the protection which the law affords them, and it has been entrusted to me to see that the Quarantine law is enforced in this county, and the people receive the protection against disease which they are entitled to.

I am under oath to do my duty in regard to this matter, so if any one violates this law they may expect to be prosecuted.

Respectfully yours,

Dr. W. R. McIntosh,
Quarantine Officer.

Gentle Sports in Arizona.

"Turn 'em out wild"—that's the word out in the wild land of Arizona.

Some Fair they had in Elkhead July 3, 4 and 5th. Yep! Who got away with the prize money? Whistling Slim Meacham took first in the steer-roping, first in the steer-riding, first in the steer bulldogging, second in the calf-roping. "Whistling Slim" is as fast as chain lightning, and throws a forked loop. He's that top hand from Diamond Bar K Outfit that you've often heard about. Where did he get that name, Whistling Slim? Well, I'll tell you about him. At the Ranch he carries himself in a formal status, and whistling a melody most of the time when he's not asleep, especially when he is around Kate Cumberland; and if you'd see Kate you'd whistle, too, for she's the prettiest girl in Navajo county.

That steer bulldogging is some stunt, ain't it? Pretty exciting, pardner, too. It takes more nerve than I've got to to undertake that stunt.

Poor Frank Stevens, he'll never ride any more; it was too bad about him. Frank came out on a bucking steer that was a crooked jumping ox, but was weaving too fast and furious to stand on his props, and turned over, falling on his rider. That was the last of poor Frank Stevens; he never did speak again. But we had clean events and some real bronc riders and fast ropers were in Elkhead, Arizona, July 3, 4 and 5.

Goodbye Editor.

Sincerely yours,

Jack Lowery.

WHOLESALE THIEF

named James C. Mayberry, aged 50, who it is charged made systematic raids upon country stores, loading his truck with the articles and then lighting out for Virginia where he sold them. It has been suggested that perhaps the robbery of Mr. Frutchey's store may have been on this order, perhaps by Mayberry himself or some of his "lieutenants."

The POST-DISPATCH is in touch with the Danville police in the effort to find out from Mayberry as to whether he was connected with this Frutchey job, but up to going to press has not been able to get the desired information.

The following is the Greensboro News account of Mayberry's operations, and the story will be found interesting in connection with this Frutchey store robbery.

"Danville, Va., Aug. 6.—The local police department is confronted with a robbery case unique in the annals of law violation. It concerns the wholesale theft of goods from country stores in North Carolina by James C. Mayberry, aged 50, who was yesterday arrested in a little storehouse he rented recently on the Chatham road about 9 miles north of this city. According to the police, Mayberry has been stocking his store with goods he stole from rural stores, making sorties in the night time with a large covered motor truck, filling it full of notions and returning to his own store and setting up the merchandise on his shelves. There are two cases against Mayberry at present and he has made a confession. He admits having stolen fully $500 worth of merchandise from W. A. Phillips, proprietor of a general store at Bear Creek in Chatham county, N. C., and also rifling the store of Walter Oliver, at Milton, N. C. While Mayberry yesterday denied having stolen from other stores, the police are investigating the report that within the past two years Mayberry opened eight or nine stores in the vicinity of Danville, one of them a jewelry store where he quickly sold out merchandise and then gave up his lease. The theory of the police is that Mayberry has been engaged in this wholesale thievery for some time. In making his confession, Mayberry, who claims to be a master mechanic, states that he was hard pressed for money and that he needed funds to pay the expenses of his wife, who, he claims, is an invalid. Enquiry elsewhere reveals that his wife is not in good health but that she works in one of the local mills. It is further declared by the police that Mayberry has been in the habit of taking all of his wife's earnings each week.

"Yesterday Deputy Sheriff J. B. McManus, of Chatham county, came to Danville and enlisting the assistance of the local police motored to the store which Mayberry opened and there served on him a warrant. They say Mayberry admitted that the "fat was in the fire" and that he pointed out the goods he had stolen a few night ago in Chatham county. The material was brought to Danville and Mayberry lodged in jail.

"A bunch of master keys were taken from the man. He said that he entered the stores he robbed by these keys. Phillips not many days ago discovered one morning that his stock was sadly depleted. Entire shelves of dress goods, overalls, towelling, gingham and many other articles of apparel were empty. He notified the police and it was learned that a man driving a large covered truck had been seen in the vicinity and that some boys had seen a light in the store and a man moving about.

"The officers picked up the trail of the truck which had driven to the store door and by the brand of tires they were able to trail him almost to Greensboro. Here the trail was lost but by diligent use of the telephone the man's trail was picked up and it was learned that a man owning such a truck had opened the store near Danville. An investigation made here clinched the matter and the North Carolina officer came with the warrant.

"Mayberry has expressed a desire to be taken back to North Carolina and dealt with as quickly as possible. He is a native of Carroll county and only recently took up residence here."

A series of revival services at Cartledge's creek, came to a close last Friday afternoon, Rev. S. C. Glosson doing the preaching. 5 new members were added and many revived as a result of his impressive sermons. Some of the sermons were: "The Way to Heaven," "What Sin is Doing for the World," "Faith," etc. Rev. Mr. Rourke, of Ellerbe, preached an able sermon Thursday morning, his subject being "Obedience."

How our hearts were saddened again on August 1st, when we heard that God, in his loving way, had come and plucked another flower from our midst—little William Brooks Allen. All that loving hands and physicians could do for the relief of the little one was done, but to no avail. The little body was laid to rest at Northam cemetery. The grave was entirely covered with flowers placed there by loving friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Allen have the sympathy of their many friends in this, their hour of sadness. They must remember that their little one is at rest—that God's will must be done, not ours, and that some day, not now, they'll read the meaning of their tears.

Mrs. D. H. Peele and little daughter, Dorothy Louise, spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. John C. Covington.

The ladies and girls of the Missionary Society gave Mr. Hampton Covington a canned fruit and vegetable pounding last Thursday at the church, just after dinner was over. The ladies placed everything on the long table, and the pastor presented the present to Mr. Covington. His wife died sometime ago, and he is old and has no one to prepare things for him. The bible plainly teaches that if we give to those who have, we shall get no reward. So the Lord's supper is kept in whatsoever we share.

"Not what we give, but what we share, For the gift without the giver is bare. Who gives himself with his gift feeds three—Himself, his hungry neighbor, and me."

Again on Friday the pastor was pounded.

Baptizing the third Sunday down at the creek just below the church.

Methodist Church Sunday.

Rev. A. L. Ormond writes the POST-DISPATCH from the St. John church in Scotland county, where he has been doing the preaching in the six-church revival, that he will hold services in the Methodist church at Rockingham Sunday, and requests that those who were converted in the Mc-Lendon meeting and expect to join his church to be present then.
